We all Sing,
Some better than others.
I, Myself have a voice,
but I would not compare, my own with the voice of a songbird.

The Songbird’s voice is shrill and exciting.
It sings to me about the willow trees where her young shall hatch.

The Songbird sings to me about the river which, where she met her mate.
Oh, How they danced and sang near those willow trees, where her younglings shall give life.

Her voice, so sweet to me, while i lay in the grass.
As i listen to her story,
I imagine it all,
I see the trees!
then I hear a shout.

The shout comes from my mother, bringing me back to reality.
As I see my storytaker flying, through the trees.
I see her without a doubt.
Her song is always singing, her love is always showing. The songbird in my dreams.

Maddie Frye, 8th grade
Stanwood A. Murphy Elementary School
Scotia, CA
As we showed are faces to the front door I saw it.

I saw its pain the monster had it clenched between its teeth. As I put one foot in front of the other.

I picked the dead creature up in my hands.

So sure it wouldn’t see light again.

I put my gentle finger on the dead bird, suddenly, it lifted itself up.

Then the creature spun itself around my room with its small body.

Like a tornado that would never stop.

The beautiful bird stopped itself.

It let me put its fragile frame into my hands.

Then it flew out into the sky and was gone.

Jeshelle Roybal 8th grade
Stanwood A. Murphy Elementary School
Scotia, CA
On my way back from my journey something caught my eye and instead of looking away I looked up and saw the sky the beautiful ray of light, looked like a stage light and from the redwood giants it seemed like I was in heaven.

Olivia Sanchez 7th Grade,
Stanwood A. Murphy Elementary School
Scotia, CA
Whispering Winds

The wind whispers in the trees The wind whispers to me The wind whispers in my sleep The wind whispers in the deep The wind whispers beside me The wind whispers beneath The wind whispers underneath

Mollie Sager 8th grade,
Stanwood A. Murphy Elementary School
Scotia, CA
The white and blue sky
A bird jets through the calm air
The bird is whirling

Rainel Prater, 8th grade,
Stanwood A. Murphy Elementary School
Scotia, CA
The River Dreams

Does the water flow which way it dreams or Does it flow the path of others

Does it have a voice of its own or Is it acting like what other people Want it to be.

I think the river should be What it wants to be Not what others want it to Become in life

Life is a river
That has dreams of its own

If you don’t follow the river Your dreams won’t flow through Life with you following them

Dream through life
Flow through triumphantly
The river will Thank you.

Rori Arndt, 7th grade Cuddeback Elementary School
Ode To The Ocean

Ode to you the ocean Whose thirst can never be satisfied. “I cover most of the world do I not?”
Yes, you take water from the tallest peaks of the world. The freshest water in the world.
“Not only do I do that, but I support the most beautiful creatures that you still have not discovered.”
Yes they are beautiful. You the most blue, never lose your beauty.

Thomas Mathews
Stanwood A. Murphy Elementary School
Scotia, CA
I travel all day and all night
Anxious to reach my destination
I arrive and witness a beautiful sight;
Much more beautiful than my expectation

I see animals reunite, Rocks intricately carved by abrasion
But the prettiest thing of all gave me a feeling of fright Mountains towering at an unbelievable height

It was incredible, yet how did I fit into this equation
As a human, it made me feel I committed an act of invasion But taking a deep breath, I suddenly felt incredible might This awe made me humble, curiously satisfied with the world.

Agustin Garcinuno, 8th grade
Stanwood A. Murphy Elementary School
Scotia, CA
Beauty

I am a bird, more importantly I am a crow
I am a crow on a farm
I am seeking beauty but all I see is corn corn, fields of corn endless corn
I crave beauty
I look around but I see nothing that interests me I see a building in the far distance I fly closer closer closer
It is the farmer’s house
I look into the living room but there is nothing I find that is beautiful I fly around the building
I find an open window
I go inside
I look to the left
I see nothing but an old washtub
I look to the right it has a beautiful silver boarder it is reflecting the room around it I take a step forward and I see my face
I take another step I see my whole body
I crave beauty no more
For I have found pure beauty Ah, true beauty!

Cassius Klinetobe, 8th grade
Stanwood A. Murphy Elementary School
Scotia, CA
I am an eagle flying around so majestically with my tail high in the air

I am free and wild to do what I want

I am looking around for something to do then suddenly a fish jumps

I swoop down quick as a bullet

I grab it in my talons and fly away

At my nest I feed my young and snuggle down and get some rest for the day ahead

Cecil Smith, 8th grade
Stanwood A. Murphy Elementary School,
Scotia, CA